PARTICIPANT HANDOUT

PART ONE

Create your warm list

List the people who already know you and who you feel could be a potential opportunity.

- You don't have to be sure they'll buy.
- This is exploratory. Write the names down first, decide later.

01 Past buyers

People who have bought from you in the past 12 months, low ticket or high ticket. Based on our own internal data, someone who has already spent money with you is 8x more likely to buy again.

| | NAME | WHAT THEY BOUGHT | REACHED OUT |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | | | ☐ |
| 2 | | | ☐ |
| 3 | | | ☐ |
| 4 | | | ☐ |
| 5 | | | ☐ |
| 6 | | | ☐ |
| 7 | | | ☐ |
| 8 | | | ☐ |

02 Past sales conversations

People you've had a sales conversation with in the past 6 months.

| | NAME | WHAT YOU TALKED ABOUT | REACHED OUT |

PART TWO

Outreach guide

Every outreach conversation follows three steps. You open the door, surface a real gap... and only then offer a next step that helps close it.

II

THE 3-PART FRAMEWORK

01

Connect

Open the door without being weird.

02

Uncover

Surface the gap between where they are and where they want to be.

03

Invite

Offer a bridge call, only if there's a clear gap you can help solve.

> No pitch before a need is established.

Keys to success

- Be authentic and genuine. Build real connections. Don't be a robot.
- Bring the right energy behind the action. Generosity, service, curiosity, presence. This isn't about you getting leads or clients. It's about building relationships and helping people solve problems.
- Create value by offering relevant solutions. Every invitation should be a response to a stated problem, need or desire. That's the opposite of "spray and pray," pitching your stuff to people who may or may not want it.

STEP 1

Connect

Your only job here is to open the door. Don't open with a pitch, and avoid manufactured questions designed to force a conversation.

3 WAYS TO CONNECT

1. A genuine compliment. On their content, a post, or something you saw of theirs.
   "Really resonated with that post you shared last week on boundaries."
2. The value drop. Share something useful tied to what they've said.
   "Was thinking about what you said about X. Thought you might find this helpful."
3. A genuine curiosity question. Follow up on something real.
   "Did you ever end up figuring out X?"

> PITFALL TO AVOID: THE FRIEND ZONE
>
> Connect can drag on into endless small talk. The goal isn't to build rapport forever. It's to open the door, then naturally lead into Uncover.

STEP 2

Uncover

We are problem solvers, not product pushers. To solve a problem, you first have to surface one.

UNCOVER THE GAP

| | WHAT IT IS | EXAMPLE |
|---|---|---|
| A | Where they are now | Booking 1 discovery call a week |
| B | Where they want to be | Booking 5 a week, going full-time |
| The gap | What's stopping them from getting there | No consistent way to start conversations |

TWO ENTRY POINTS

You only need to surface one side to find the gap.

- Surface A, the problem. "How have things been going since you launched?"
- Surface B, the goal. "What are you working towards right now?"

PITFALLS TO AVOID

- Coaching them. Your job during Uncover is not to solve the gap. Your job is to surface it.
- Minimizing their pain or over-validating. "Oh, it's not that bad" takes away the reason to change.
- Going on too long. 2 to 3 questions is usually all you need before you can make an invite.

STEP 3

Invite

Invite only if a clear gap is established that you can help solve. No gap, no invite. Keep the conversation going, or let your content do the work.

The bridge call. A 20-minute, value-forward conversation, framed around helping them with the specific gap you uncovered.

PUTTING IT TOGETHER

The conversation, start to finish

Here's how the three steps play out in a real DM thread, in five stages. Adapt the wording to your niche.

1. Intro message

- Share a genuine, specific compliment about their work or profile, or point out common ground.
- No question at the end. Wait for them to reply before you ask your first question. It feels far less pushy.

EXAMPLES

> Hey Rachel... thanks for accepting my friend request. Love what you're up to... really resonated with that post you shared last week on boundaries.

> Hey Laura... thanks for accepting my friend request. Really resonating with the work you're up to. Mindfulness has been transformative for me. Love that you're introducing more people to the power of this practice :)

> Hey John... saw you just joined our FB group, wanted to reach out and say welcome to the family. Your profile says you live in Colorado... my partner and I actually just moved to Denver a few months back...

2. Build rapport

After they reply (usually with a thank you), 1 to 2 rapport questions can help. Skip this if you already know the person well. Be human: authentic conversation works best.

EXAMPLE QUESTIONS

- How long have you been coaching for?
- What inspired you to start coaching?
- What inspired you to want to help others with [their area of expertise]?

How to format your replies: acknowledge what they just said, then ask your next question. You're always leading with your next question.

> Oh, that's cool. Sounds like you're a seasoned pro. What inspired you to want to help others deepen their own mindfulness practice?

For some people, it's best to stop here and let your content build the relationship over time. For others, keep going. Feel out what's aligned for you and for the person you're talking to.

3. Uncover a gap

Once there's some rapport, ask questions that uncover a gap in the specific area you help with. Every gap has two sides:

- A problem they're experiencing today: not enough leads, poor health, unhappy in their career, not making enough money, not sure how to attract clients.
- A goal they haven't reached yet: going full-time as a coach, deeper intimacy with their partner, making six figures, losing 30 lbs.

At this point, aim to uncover just one side.

OPENING QUESTIONS

- How have things been going for you so far?
- How've things been going since you launched?
- What are you working towards now?
- Any specific goals you're working towards this year?

4. Deepen the gap

When you spot a thread, pull on it. Clarifying questions expose the gap and the pain or desire underneath it.

EXAMPLE QUESTIONS

- What do you mean by that?
- What's most challenging for you about that?
- What part of that has been most difficult?
- Do you feel like you've got the plan for that figured out, or are you still dialing in the right strategy?

DRAW THE GAP OUT WITH NUMBERS

> How many discovery calls are you booking on average per week?
> — How many would you like to be booking?

> Is your goal to ultimately go full-time as a coach?
> — That's exciting... how many clients will you need to take the leap?
> — Okay, that's pretty doable. And how many clients do you have today?

> How much revenue does the business need so you can replace your job income?
> — Okay, that's pretty doable. And how much is it bringing in per month on average today?

5. Invite to the next step

Once the gap is clear, invite them to a bridge call in a way that shows how it helps them close that gap.

KEYS TO AN EFFECTIVE INVITATION

1. Show how the call creates value for them. Tie it to the specific gap you found. Be specific, and use their exact words where you can.
2. Always ask permission before sending a link.
   "Want to hop on a quick call?" · "Is that something you'd find valuable?" · "Would that be helpful for you?"
3. Tell them exactly what to do. Click this link, book a time here.

SAMPLE INVITATION

> Want to hop on a call and take a closer look at this? We can look at your current diet and exercise plan and figure out what you need to get on track for that 30 lb weight-loss goal you mentioned. Won't charge you.

TIPS

Holding the conversation

Keep control of the conversation

- After your intro message, end every reply with a question that moves the conversation where you want it to go.
- You don't have to answer every question they ask.

Use tension

Tension is born when someone becomes aware of a problem, sees how big it is, and feels the discomfort of the gap between where they are and where they want to be.

Tension is of service. It's the fuel that motivates people to take action and change their lives. So don't relieve it too early with validation, false comfort ("oh, it's not as bad as you think"), or by solving their problem in the DMs.

BUILD TENSION BY

- Validating the problem, its size, and what it's costing them.
  "That's definitely a tricky one..."
  "Oh yeah... that's probably one of the biggest things that holds people back from attracting clients."
- A simple "Hmm..."
- Creating open loops.
  "That can definitely be tough before you get the right diet dialed in..."

Tone

- Casual, but professional. Go easy on emojis and exclamation points.
- Warm, but brief. You're a busy professional with a lot going on.
- Doctor vibe when you ask questions: curious, calm, diagnosing.
- Leadership and authority. You're the prize.
  "Happy to spend a few mins with you... here's a link to my open spots" rather than "what time works best for you?"

PART THREE

Sample conversations

III

These are based closely on real DM conversations I've had, but have been modified for this handout.

Notice how each one connects first, uncovers a gap in a few questions, and only then invites to a 20-minute bridge call tied to what the person actually said they want. Swap in your own booking link wherever you see [your booking link].

Diane

| | |
|---|---|
| NOW | Marketing plan isn't dialed in yet |
| WANTS | 3 new clients a month, starting in February |

JASON Hey Diane, thanks for accepting my friend request. Nice to connect with you. Really cool work you're doing.

DIANE Hey Jason! Thank you for reaching out. I love being connected with like-minded souls.

JASON Likewise. Love how you're helping others find alignment in their lives and careers.

Super important work, especially with all the shifts and changes going on in our world right now. Feel like there's more of a desire and need for that than ever.

How long have you been coaching for?

DIANE I've been coaching for over 10 years in a corporate environment. Finally started my own business a few years ago. And yes, now is a good time for self-reflection and making changes.

JASON Congrats on taking the leap into entrepreneurship. That's a big move.

What inspired you to transition out of corporate and into your own thing?

DIANE Thanks! I'm still in corporate since I love the job I've created there, and I have access to impact over 40,000 people. I'm working towards full-time coaching in about two years.

JASON Ah, that's exciting. Why two years?

DIANE Retiree benefits. I'll be considered an early retiree if I wait till then.

JASON Ah, I see... that makes sense.

Are you looking to take on more coaching clients?

Or happy with the balance right now...

DIANE — I'm looking to take on more clients... 3 per month starting in February.

JASON — Oh cool.

Do you feel like you've got the marketing plan dialed in to make that happen, or still kinda working on putting the right pieces in place?

DIANE — I'll be focused on LinkedIn mostly. I have a mentor who's also a coach and works for the same corporation. She's beta testing some things right now, so I'll be modeling after her with whatever works.

Always room for improvement though.

JASON

> THE INVITE
> Want to hop on a quick 20-minute call and chat about this? I've got another client we set up to market exclusively on LinkedIn... I can share what I've seen work best for her, so you can get on track to bring in those 3 clients a month starting in February. Won't charge you.

DIANE — That would be awesome, thank you. Let's set up a time? Tomorrow at noon EST works for me, or same time on Friday.

JASON — Sounds good.

Want to grab a time here that works for you?

[your booking link]

DIANE — Will do!

Booked for tomorrow. Looking forward to our chat!

Carla

> NOW — Booking 1–3 discovery calls a week
> WANTS — 2–3 discovery calls a day

JASON — Hey Carla, thanks for accepting my friend request. Nice to connect with you. Really cool work you're doing.

CARLA — Well thank you!

JASON — Of course. Public speaking is such a powerful and important skill. (Former Toastmasters president here, so I guess I'm a little biased.)

How long have you been coaching for?

CARLA

I was a competitive speech and debate coach at the high school level for 20+ years. Then I left teaching (but kept coaching outside the classroom) and later decided to take this online. I love that you're a former Toastmasters president. You and I speak the same language! I started Toastmasters and had to bow out when we adopted our son.

JASON

Love that... what an incredible journey. Sounds like you've got quite a background in coaching and education. And agreed, Toastmasters can be an incredible training ground.

When did you make the transition online?

CARLA

Oh sorry, been doing it since last year.

JASON

Oh wow... that's pretty recent. What inspired you to step into the online world?

CARLA

After teaching, I worked for an entrepreneur who created software we used in the debate world. Along the way I got my life coach certification and coached speech on the side, then had to pause because of family stuff.

I stayed working for the same person for about 13 years. Then COVID. I knew it was time to finally go all in. I was offered a teaching job but knew I was supposed to be doing something different. I turned it down, and here I am...

JASON

Love that journey. I appreciate that you're choosing to follow your deepest calling over the security of a stable paycheck.

I've got a lot of respect for those who choose to be brave and take that leap. It isn't easy, especially in the early days.

How's the journey been going since making the transition online? I know there's quite a bit to figure out... the beginning was definitely pretty bumpy for me.

CARLA

I won't lie... it's been a lot to figure out. I told myself I'd give it 3 years before I gave up. It's been a huge learning curve, so different from the in-person world. Clients are just now coming in as I get more clear.

JASON

I can appreciate that... it's definitely not easy to sort out, especially as the online space has gotten a lot more crowded.

What's been most challenging about the whole marketing and online side for you?

CARLA

Probably the tech (automation) and sales. Most of the programs I'd been through were about ads, and I think I had a false sense of security that the leads would just come floating in. Now that I'm getting clearer on my direction, I'm tweaking the messaging a bit too.

JASON

Hmm... you can usually get by with a pretty simple tech stack until you hit around six figures.

How are you generating leads right now?

CARLA

Videos, and posting in a couple of membership groups. My tech is pretty simple. I have one sales page, a calendar and an email list, and that's about it.

JASON

Ah, gotcha... I see.

How many calls are you booking on average per week right now?

CARLA

1–3.

JASON Are those discovery calls? Or more like friendly connection calls?

CARLA If they're booked, they're more discovery calls.

JASON Gotcha... how many would you like to be booking?

CARLA I'd love it if I had 2–3 a day.

JASON Okay... probably pretty doable with a few tweaks.

JASON

> THE INVITE
> Want to hop on a quick 20-minute call and chat about this? I can take a look at your current strategy and help you dial in a few things, so you can go from 1–3 calls a week toward those 2–3 a day. Won't charge you.

CARLA Ok, you have me curious... let's schedule something! Here's my booking link.

JASON Happy to chat.

Would you mind grabbing a time here?

Emma

> NOW Doing all lead follow-up by hand, missing opportunities
> WANTS To hit six figures this year

JASON Hey Emma, thanks for accepting my friend request. Nice to connect with you. Really cool work you're doing.

EMMA Hey Jason, so sorry, I've been having trouble with FB. Just seen your message. Lovely to connect.

JASON All good.

Really appreciate your mission of helping moms reclaim more confidence and clarity. Super important work.

How long have you been doing that for?

EMMA Roughly 6 months. Still a newbie!

JASON Ah, that's an exciting place to be.

How's the journey been going for you so far?

EMMA So far so good. My children are off school at the moment so that's taking priority, but fingers crossed they're back next week so I can go all in. How's your journey so far?

JASON I can imagine your hands must be pretty full right now.

Do you have a big vision for where you're hoping to take things this year, once the kiddos go back to school?

EMMA

I'd like to smash six figures, launch my website, and be well known for my services. Haha, just a few small goals.

JASON

Those are great goals. It took me 18 months to hit six figures in my first coaching business, so you can definitely get there.

Do you do mostly 1-to-1 coaching today?

EMMA

Yes, 1:1 at the moment. I'd love to do some groups, but consistency with posting to socials is an issue for me, so I feel like I'm letting myself down. It's a rubbish feeling to miss opportunities just from being so busy.

JASON

Definitely a bummer when great opportunities fall through the cracks.

Do you have any systems or automation you use to manage lead flow?

Or is it all by hand?

EMMA

Nope, it's all by hand. I'm writing everything to everyone. My twins went back to school Wednesday, so I should have more time to put a consistency plan in place without overwhelm.

JASON

Can imagine you must be relieved having those two back in school.

Managing all of this by hand sounds pretty overwhelming, and it'll increase the chance opportunities fall through the cracks when you get busier with the fam...

JASON

> THE INVITE
>
> Want to hop on a quick 20-minute call and chat about this? I can walk you through a few simple systems to attract more clients without doing all that communication by hand, so leads stop slipping through the cracks and you can start building toward that six-figure goal. Won't charge you.

EMMA

Yes yes yes. I definitely need steering in the right direction. Let me know when's good for you, I'm pretty flexible.

JASON

Happy to help.

Lauren

| | |
|---|---|
| NOW | No paying clients yet |
| WANTS | $5.5K a month to replace lost income |

JASON

Hey Lauren, thanks for accepting my friend request. Nice to connect with you. Really cool work you're doing.

LAUREN Nice to connect with you as well! Just getting started, enjoying the process.

JASON That's an exciting place to be.

How long have you been coaching for?

LAUREN Paid? Lol. No paying clients yet.

JASON Are paying clients a goal of yours?

LAUREN Helping people is my main goal, but being paid is definitely a goal so I can make a living with it. I'm in a weird in-between space of losing my corporate job and building things to launch with coaching.

JASON What would you like to be making per month?

LAUREN At least $5.5K to cover my job loss. I'm in a business-building program right now. Building is a process, lol.

JASON Okay... $5.5K is totally doable.

Glad you've got that support too.

JASON

> THE INVITE
> Want to hop on a quick 20-minute call and map this out? I can walk you through the steps I use with early-stage coaches to land their first paying client, and map out what that could look like for you... so you can get on track to that $5.5K a month sooner. Won't charge you.

LAUREN Cool! Absolutely.

JASON Sure thing. Grab a time here that works for you:

Monique

> NOW Relying on referrals, no steady flow of clients
> WANTS 3–5 clients a month, enough to leave the 9–5

JASON Hey Monique, thanks for accepting my friend request. Nice to connect with you. Really cool work you're doing.

MONIQUE Hello Jason, you're welcome. I've been reading and listening to your content. I'm curious, how did you hear of me? I notice we share mutual friends.

JASON Thanks for the kind words. I think you were in my suggested friends list.

Glad you're enjoying the content. I'm enjoying your posts too.

How long have you been speaking and coaching for? And writing books?

MONIQUE

I'm currently in a book compilation with a well-known motivational speaker and 35 authors, launching next month. I've been writing for several years and have 2 self-published books. I've been coaching since COVID.

I work 9–5 as well, so there will be gaps in my responses. I apologize in advance.

JASON

Sounds like a really cool compilation, and congrats on getting featured alongside such a big name. That's a big accomplishment.

Definitely don't miss the 9–5 world...

Is your goal ultimately to coach, speak and write full-time?

MONIQUE

Definitely, and leave the 9–5.

JASON

Love that. So exciting when you can make that shift.

How many clients do you think you need per month to make that happen?

MONIQUE

Between 3–5 clients would be ideal.

JASON

3–5 clients is totally reasonable.

How many clients are you bringing in per month now, on average?

MONIQUE

My last client just finished my 1:1 coaching last week. I'm ready for a couple more.

JASON

Ah... gotcha.

Has it been tricky to find them?

MONIQUE

My clients refer clients to me. I don't want to depend on that though. My desire is to have a signature system eventually. I like structure, process and organization.

JASON

Gotcha...

So you mean a system and process for finding clients? Something organized, streamlined and consistent?

So you can get off the referral train and create some more consistency.

MONIQUE

Yes, definitely!

JASON

> THE INVITE
>
> Want to hop on a quick 20-minute call and chat about this? I can take a look at your marketing and help you map out the first steps of that system you're looking for, so you can stop relying on referrals and get on track to those 3–5 clients a month and leaving your 9–5. Won't charge you.

MONIQUE

Sure, please send your calendar link and I'll schedule it. Thanks.

JASON

Sure thing.

Nadia

| | |
|---|---|
| NOW | Stuck between too many niche ideas |
| WANTS | To launch at the end of the month |

JASON Hey Nadia, thanks for accepting my friend request. Nice to connect with you. Really cool work you're doing.

NADIA Hi Jason, thank you for reaching out. Good to connect with someone overseas. How long have you been a coach?

JASON Likewise. Five years for me... what about you?

NADIA I only qualified this year, but I'm really looking forward to starting. I've been a therapist for 8 years now.

JASON Oh nice. What's inspiring you to transition into coaching?

NADIA I think it was lockdown, and feeling that I wanted to learn about other supporting roles. Then I completely loved the process and the outcomes it can give.

JASON I can appreciate that... feel like lockdown created a lot of shifts for so many of us.

Have you started working with clients yet? Or just getting the business off the ground?

NADIA Yeah, trying to work out my niche. I'm a person who needs to shut my brain down a bit... so many ideas.

I want to launch at the end of the month for the new year.

JASON I get that... it can be pretty overwhelming when you've got a lot of potential ideas for who you want to serve...

JASON
